Dr. David P. Donatelli Elected as Representative for the ACP Council for the American Board of Prosthodontics
Temple University Professor and Alum Elected

CHICAGO – David P. Donatelli, DDS, FACP, was elected to serve as the Newly Boarded representative for the American College of Prosthodontists Council for the American Board of Prosthodontics. Each year, members of the ACP are elected to join the eight member Council for the American Board of Prosthodontics (ABP). In this role they nominate, screen, interview and select candidates for the election of the new examiner for the board certification assessment.

“Successfully challenging the Board after 30 years since completing graduate training was a monumental undertaking involving a significant commitment,” Dr. Donatelli explains. “I believe that I can offer the Council insight on how to encourage more participation of qualified individuals and I welcome the opportunity to serve.”

Dr. Donatelli is a full-time assistant professor and the course and clinic director for Removable Prosthodontics at Temple University Kornberg School of Dentistry. He is a Diplomate of the ABP, a Fellow of the ACP and has been a member of the ACP for 35 years, serving on many committees, task forces and in leadership roles.

Outside of the ACP, Dr. Donatelli is a member of many medical associations and has held a number of leadership positions within those organizations.
